Green Mountain Area Homeschoolers - The Pretty Big Pollinator Project!

The Green Mountain Area Homeschoolers first began planning The Pretty Big Pollinator Project! in pre-pandemic February 2020, but they had to quickly adapt their project due to pandemic restrictions. The students used new resources such as Zoom, social media and a website they developed to achieve the project's goals of increasing pollinator awareness and education in the community. The students taught pollinator-related art in online classes, collected 75 student contributions for their online pollinator blog, and created a butterfly themed lamppost for display at Heritage Lakewood's Adopt a Lamp Post Contest, winning the People's Choice design award. The Pretty Big Pollinator Project! may not have been what the students initially envisioned, but their resilience allowed them to achieve their goals and learn new skills.
